The Tokyo (Narita) - Taipei (Taoyuan) route will resume service after almost one and a half years since its suspension on March 27, 2021, with two round trip flights per week for the time being. This is the third international route to resume service, following the previously announced Osaka (Kansai) - Seoul (Incheon) and Taipei (Taoyuan) routes.

Since launching the Osaka (Kansai) - Taipei (Taoyuan) route in 2012, Peach has operated a total of 10 routes between Japan and Taiwan and served more than 5 million passengers.

Regarding the resumption of the third international route, Representative Director and CEO Mori commented, "Finally, Peach is resuming international flights from Narita! We will soon celebrate the 10th anniversary of our Taiwan route, which has been nurtured by many customers since we inaugurated service on the Osaka (Kansai) - Taipei (Taoyuan) route in October 2012. With the resumption of flights from Narita, we hope that people in the Tokyo metropolitan area will once again be able to visit Taiwan, and that the people of Taiwan will be able to enjoy Tokyo more conveniently. In addition, it is now possible to travel to Taiwan from anywhere in Japan via Narita Airport. In the same way, customers from Taiwan will also be able to visit various parts of Japan more easily via Narita Airport. We hope that Peach's flights which connect both Tokyo and Osaka to Taiwan will once again deepen exchanges and connections between Japan and Taiwan."

Peach will once again serve as a “bridge to Asia,” offering easy air travel and contributing to the revitalization of population exchange between Japan and the rest of Asia. We give the top priority to the safety in flight operations and implement thorough infection control measures.

Peach had suspended all international flights since April 8, 2021, but is gradually resuming international flights.
